

Faculty Adopts New Grading Plan For Whole University

Honor Point Standard Required

At a meeting of the University Faculty on May 9, a unified system of grading for the whole University was adopted. Undergraduates in all schools of the University and first year candidates for the degree of B. D. in the Graduate School of Theology are to be graded on a basis which eliminates the use of plus and minus signs. The system goes into effect in the fall term this September.

The several most outstanding changes are that an "I" (incomplete) mark may be changed within a definite time limit but will only favor the student with the passing mark of "D", which is below average. Honor points will be offered per credit hour each Semester. Candidates for the Bachelor of Arts degree who have earned 60 or more semester hours credit will be required at the end of the year to have earned as many honor points as semester hours. Candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Divinity will be required to have earned 30 honor points when they have earned 10 units of credit. Students who earn 24 or more honor points may be continued on probation for one semester. Those who fail to earn 24 honor points when they have earned 10 units of credit, or who fail to earn removal from probation will not be permitted to continue as candidates for a degree.

Details in particular will appear in the handbook and catalog during the summer and the new system will go into effect beginning in September.

Norman Guy to Head Economic Department

From Mount Allison University, Sackville, New Brunswick, Canada, comes the latest addition to the growing Faculty of Brothers College—Dr. Norman M. Guy, Head of the Department of Economics of that University.

Professor Guy's academic training was begun at St. John's College, Newfoundland, and continued to the Bachelor of Arts degree at Mount Allison, where he received the degree in 1912, with first class honors in Philosophy and the award of a gold medal in logic and psychology. While an undergraduate he was for three years leader of the University's intercollegiate debating team.

Professor Guy spent three years as a student in the Graduate School of Harvard School University specializing in economics, sociology and social ethics. The Master of Arts degree in Economics was awarded him by Harvard in 1924. The following year he passed the Board Examinations at Harvard for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. When Professor Guy had completed about half his research for his thesis, he discovered that many of the documents he would need for his study were not to be found on this side of the Atlantic and a trip to England became necessary. A traveling fellowship from Harvard was available and through this, Professor Guy has been able to make several trips abroad in order to complete his thesis.

Professor Guy will take up his new duties in Brothers College in September of this year.

GRADUATING!

Here is the picture for which we have been waiting;—for who doesn't anxiously await the winner of a beauty contest? Believe it or not, gentle reader, Georgie is the most handsome man in the senior class of the Seminary. Now for fear you may get us wrong we had better explain a few things. First, George was chosen two months ago, while he was still enjoying the bliss of single manhood. Second, our photographer did not get to work until recently, and George, in the meantime had become a fond 'hubby'. Could you believe that so short a space of married life could so change a man? Yet, as Aesop, Goldberg, Faulkner, or some other noble Roman has said: "The camera does not lie." You will notice that that charming set of teeth, which showing through those smiling lips, was the veritable delight of the campus coeds, has been sadly marred. Also where is that scholarly expression which formerly so startled the faculty? Alas! what a change a few timely blows may bring about in even our finest specimens of young stalwart youth. George, however, still claims that the only real state in life is that of a married man. After studying the above photo, and being assured of his convictions on the subject, the least we, as classmates, can do for our beloved, friend is to honor him for his martyrdom.

Corrington Secured For Biology Chair

Brothers College of Liberal Arts recently announced an addition to its faculty in the person of Dr. Julian D. Corrington, who comes from the assistant professorship of zoology at Syracuse University to be Associate Professor of Biology at Brothers College.

Professor Corrington is a graduate of Cornell University, Ithaca, in the class of 1913, and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Zoology from the same school in 1925. His varied teaching career begins with an assistant in zoology at Cornell in 1914. He was promoted to Curator of the Museum in 1916, which post he held until 1920.

Following this he was assistant professor of Biology at the University of South Carolina until 1922 and full professor until 1926. In 1926 he went to Syracuse as assistant professor of Zoology. He is a contributor to several publications devoted to the technical aspects of Zoology and Biology.

Twelve Seniors to Continue in School

At least twelve members of the graduating class plan to continue in school. Many are planning to remain at Drew for their post graduate work. Among those planning to stay on this campus for their Ph. D. degrees are the following; J. W. Broyles, W. E. Bishop, C. W. Turner and Jim McClintock. 'Bob' Clark will be a candidate for Ph. D. either here or at Hartford Theological Seminary. Harry Brown expects to travel abroad for study. Agnes Nilson expects to study either in Norway or India. "Wes" Lord will study at Edinburgh, Scotland, pursuing his M. A. Joe Short will remain at Drew and complete his work for the degree of Th. M. Ken Grady will continue at N. Y. U. toward an M. A. Turo Yamaka will study at Union Seminary taking work leading to a Th. M., and John Althouse plans to take his M. A. at the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church of America, at Lancaster, Pa.

Senior Class to Honor Dr. Hannan

The graduating class of the Seminary, the last class to have known, and thus the last class to have really appreciated, Dr. F. Watson Hannan, will show its esteem for this true Saint of God when, at commencement season, it presents to the Seminary Chapel a pulpit Bible in the loving memory of Dr. Hannan, in all things a wise counselor and friend of the class, and one whose life will always stand out before us as a challenge to the best that is in us, in the service of mankind.

Prize Established For Homiletics

A new prize of $100, to be known as the Samuel F. Upham prize, has been founded by Professor Mortimer Powell Giffin, Lecturer in Church History in the department of Homiletics. The yearly prize will be offered not necessarily to the best preacher of the Homiletics class but to the student who makes the greatest improvement in conditions in his church or charge.

The Samuel F. Upham prize was founded by Professor Giffin in memory of his beloved teacher. Dr. Upham was the Librarian at Drew from 1881-1891 and was Professor of Practical Theology from 1881-1904.

The course of Homiletics will be more popular than ever this fall with the added work of Dr. Lynn Harold Hough who starts his Professorship in September; the addition of the field work will also make the course more outstanding. With the founding of the Samuel E. Upham prize for excellence, the department of Homiletics will offer excellent instruction, practical experience, in addition to a monetary goal for which to strive.

Professor Corrington has been a member of the New York State Board of Regents committee on Biology papers.

Professor Corrington's membership include the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Professors, the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists, Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa. He is a communicant of the Methodist Episcopal Church and is a Mason.

New Scholarships Announced By Trustees For Arts College

First College Scholarships

Announcement of 16 new four-year scholarships, with a total value of $500 each, was made recently by Dean William P. Tolley of Brothers College. Each of these "Trustees Scholarships" will cover one-half the annual tuition of a Brothers College student, or $125 per year, and will be held during the entire four years of the college course. Four graduates of New Jersey high schools will be honored with awards before the opening of the fall term in September and four more each of the following three years until eventually sixteen men are occupying the Trustees Scholarships at one time.

Although preference is to be given to boys from the northern New Jersey area, the competition is open to all preparatory and high schools in this state.

The high school academic record of each applicant will be considered with great care but in addition to this, he will be elevated on his promise of leadership as evidenced by his participation in high school activities or in other ways and in his personality and character.

Applicants are to be interviewed by Dean Tolley personally. The applicant must present his high school record, the names of three or four responsible citizens who have known him intimately for several years, and a list of his out-of-school activities during the period of his high school life. The scholarship will be awarded without written examination.

Thompson Heads Dept. of Rel. Ed.

The trustees of Drew University at a recent meeting created a new department in the field of Religious Education, and authorized President Brown to secure a professor to become its head. The Department will be called The Administration of Religious Education, and will be under the direction of James Voorhees Thompson.

The new professor comes to Drew at the height of a career which has been especially rich in training and experience. He graduated from Wesleyan University in 1902 with the A. B. degree. He also won letters in football, baseball and track. In 1905 he graduated from Drew Theological Seminary with the degree of B. D., in the same class with Dr. Lynn Hough, Bishop H. Lester Smith, Dr. Edmund D. Soper, the President of Ohio Wesleyan University.

Professor Thompson received his degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Northwestern University in 1929 and served as professor in Northwestern, Division of Religious Education, 1928-1930. Dr. Thompson is the author of several textbooks and manuals for young people.

Dr. Thompson will offer courses in the College of Religious Education and Missions as well as in the Graduate School of Drew Theological Seminary. He will begin his duties September, 1930.

Professor and Mrs. Corrington will move to Madison during the summer. His new work in Brothers College begins in September.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING

Several years ago a little fellow got his first sight of a mountain. He was on a trip with his dad. They saw the mountain from a distance and the little fellow's heart beat fast. They followed the well paved Lincoln Highway as it wound in and out through the trees and boulders. The road winding, revealed here an interesting group of trees, there an attractively colored rock. After the boy drank his fill of these scenes he looked anxiously forward to the next turn wondering what lay behind it. In this way the boy traveled up the mountain unconscious of the progress he was making. After a while they stopped in a spot from which they could see the Lincoln Highway twist and turn up the side of the mountain. The boy was astonished at the altitude he had reached. He saw the little town where he had spent the night down there in the valley to be so small that he could hold it in one of his little hands. Those experiences along the way began to line up in proper sequence and he got a view of the trip as a whole that added much to his appreciation and understanding.

Perhaps it would be worth while for us, the members of Brothers College, to stop and look back over the way we have come. It was in September 1928 that we started our journey up the mountain of higher education. Then Brothers College was little more than a dream. There were twelve men who dared put faith in this dream and then things began to happen. They must when young men dream dreams. After a year twenty more men joined them and more things began to happen. This group passed turn after turn, each bringing them nearer to their goal.

With great interest they watched for and saw each step in the building of our physical equipment. They looked forward to the proposed Arts Building, watched each step of its growth and then when it was finished they delighted in it. Its beauty was more than they expected, its classrooms, seminars, library, chapel, reading room, chemistry laboratory and lecture hall were all that they had hoped for. Altho the building is not yet complete they are all proud of it. Again and again you may see these college men with exaggerated chests marching their guests across the campus to show them one of the seven wonders of the world. These proud men next take their astonished friends to see Roger's House, the new college dormitory. From there they take them to the other university buildings which they share with the seminary; to Mead Hall, to the Cornell Library, to the Administration Building, to the Gymnasium, to the Samuel W. Browne Refectory and to the other dormitories. And all the while both guests and hosts have been glorying in the beauties of our oaken campus. And we, as we stand here looking at our equipment can say with conviction in our voice, "We are proud of our school."

Let us look down the road again. Remember how anxiously we watched each development in the methods of our school? Remember how, with hearts beating rapidly, we heard each announcement concerning newly adopted methods, and how we talked them over, and then how we, with adventurous spirits, started out upon them? Remember the survey courses, the tutorial courses, the four hour courses with private conferences, reading period and all the rest? And now we cannot help looking forward and wondering what lies beyond that next turn marked "Honors System."

As we look forward we also find ourselves getting anxious about Professor Guy and Professor Corrington, who are to be added to our faculty next fall. We looked forward with the same anxiety to the arrival of Professors Jordy, Lankard, and Aldrich. While we are talking about our faculty it is interesting to note that all the best college crediting agents require that the majority of the members of the faculty have at least one year of graduate work and there is not a member of the Brothers College faculty with less than three years of graduate work. Of our faculty of twelve, at least seven have doctors' degrees.

Let us look again and this time notice those extra-curricular activities which we have created. Do you remember those experiences we had starting our school paper, our Spring Carnival, our basketball team, our dramatic club, our debate team and the other activities? The remarkable thing about all of this is that it was all done by the initiative of thirty-five men who already had their hands full with school work.

As we stand now and look across the country to other colleges we are

IN MEMORY OF DR. HANNAN

By the Graduating Class

Not a small part of the memory of Drew in the minds and hearts of the graduating class will center about one whom we all loved;—Dr. F. Watson Hannan. We are thankful, both individually and as a class, for the rare privilege of having known such a man and such a soul. Our relationship to this Man of Men is one that is hard to explain. To know him was to love him. Likewise to know him was to feel the secret of his greatness;—that burning fire of the Spirit of his Master driving him ever onward in the service of his fellowman. Little did we realize that he was pouring out his life blood so rapidly in his exceedingly active Christian life. How he strove to work up to the very last;—forgetting self, that we, his students, or as he would term us, 'his boys' might have the benefit of his teachings.

To see his form carried from the chapel that he loved so well did not mean that we were forever saying goodbye to our beloved professor, counsellor, and friend; for Dr. Hannan will live within us wherever we may be thruout life. As we, that day, heard those who knew him well praise the memory of this man, there kept running thru our minds a challenge like unto that never-to-be-forgotten challenge of the battlefield:—"To you from falling hands we throw the torch,

Be yours to hold it high,
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, tho' poppies grow."

Dr. Hannan carried fearlessly the torch of his Master, when we saw him thru failure of the flesh forced to abandon it we felt that he was throwing it to us, for who better should carry the torch which he carried than 'his boys,' to whom he gave his last ounce of devotion in such loving service. May God give us that spirit which was his, that personality which drew all men to him, that handclasp which so lovingly bespoke the words of a friend, and that undying courage to carry the Torch of our Master even down to the end of this life.

attracted by their bright banners and brilliant colors. We envy them that thing called school spirit. Following with our eyes our path up the mountain is there no trace of that spirit? Is there no Brothers College Spirit? No, if college spirit means a strained, more or less morbid loyalty to those small groups of students who compete in inter-collegiate competition—no! But if by college spirit is meant the loyalty to common ideals, we must say, "Yes, there is a Brothers College Spirit." And this spirit contains at least four ideals or characteristics.

The first of these is the emphasis on the academic. We are confident in stating that no college can boast of a greater—and few can boast of an equal—interest in serious study and training.

The second characteristic of this spirit is the spirit of adventure, initiative, original thinking. We have seen this in the extra-curricular activities. Again and again we have heard heated discussions between students and professors. The very nature of the school demands and nourishes this spirit of adventure.

The third characteristic is the spirit of brotherhood. Brothers was founded as a memorial to that amazing spirit of brotherliness that existed between the Baldwin brothers and the students of the college have caught a likeness to this spirit. There is a remarkable friendliness among these thirty-five radically different individuals who have lived in the close relationship which can only be peaceful when each man thinks of the others.

The fourth characteristic is probably at the bottom of the others. Brothers is a Christian college. There is a religious atmosphere about the school that is not oppressive, repulsive nor morbid but is healthy, sane, wholesome and conducive to clear thinking and character building.

Now let us turn our eyes forward! The steepest part of the journey is over; the most profitable and interesting part lies ahead. We have come a long way and we will go on! We will reach the top! We will not be satisfied with anything short of the best!

Second Annual

Spring Carnival

The Second Annual Spring Carnival was held this year on the evenings of May 2 and 3. Surpassing all previous social affairs ever held on the Campus, the activities of the week-end were never-to-be-forgotten events in the minds of the participants.

On the evening of Friday, May 2, a formal dance was held in Baldwin Hall of Brothers College. This event was arranged under the supervision of the Sophomore class. Music was furnished by the Nightingale Orchestra of Orange. The guests of the evening were Dean and Mrs. William P. Tolley; Mr. and Mrs. Sherman P. Young; Mr. Herbert Dabinett, President of the Sophomore Class; and Mr. Ronald Robinson, President of the Freshman Class.

During the afternoon of Saturday, May 3, an informal tea was enjoyed in the courtyard of the Brothers College Building by the students, their guests, members of the Faculty and their wives. At six o'clock in the evening, of this same day a banquet was held in the Banquet Hall of Samuel W. Bowne Hall where over fifty young people assembled. The tables were decorated in keeping with the Spring season. During the remainder of the evening, a party was held in Rogers House. This party was a part of the celebration of the moving-up exercises of the Freshman and Sophomore classes.

The success of this week-end Carnival may be attributed to "Dit" Schroll, '32, who was chairman of the Social Committee for the past year. The other members of the Social Committee were: Emmet Fowler, Merton Lonsdale, Stuart Thomas, and George Cordner.

First Athletic

"D's" Awarded

Another step was made in the history of Brothers College when the members of the Basketball Team received their green sweaters and gold block "D's" as acknowledgement of appreciated participation in the sport. Those men who received sweaters and letters are: Frank Carwithen, Manager of the team during the past season; "Dick" Schroll, Captain; Herbert Dabinett, Emmet Fowler, Russell Hawke, Robert Kellerman, Faulkner Lewis, and Chester Wilt. This was the first team to represent Brothers College in inter-collegiate sports. Coach W. Charles Wilson, at a banquet held for the members of the team, commented favorably upon the first athletic season of the school and expressed the possibilities of athletics at Drew in the future.

The Managership for the 1930-31 season has been given to Misak Mugrdichian, who was Assistant-manager to Carwithen during the past season. The schedule for the coming season is complete except for two dates and the entire schedule will be published during the summer.

Leo takes this opportunity to convey his appreciation to Drew Students and The Faculty for their splendid cooperation in the past. I am looking forward to renewing your acquaintance and pleasant relations of the past year next September, and until then Buenos Aires! and until then Buenos Aires!

High School Boys

Visit College

On April 25, the students and faculty of Brothers College were host to over twenty five high school visitors who had been invited from the schools of Morristown, Madison, Chatham, Summit and Millburn. It was the first open-house ever held at Brothers College.

The boys assembled in the new Brothers College building and were received by Professor Jordy of the Chemistry Department and who were later introduced to the students of the College. At 4 P. M., a motion picture, "Training for Chemical Warfare", was exhibited in the chemistry lecture room by Professor Jordy. Following, Professor Jordy conducted the interested group through the chemistry laboratories and offices.

Dr. Harry J. Smith, Librarian, then gave a talk on "The Evolution of the Book." This talk traced the history of the book from the time even preceding the parchment scrolls. Dr. Smith, as usual, added enough spice to the talk to make it worth remembering.

The students of the College then conducted the high school "seeyas" around the Campus, which was decked in its usual springtime splendor. This alone made a "hit" with the boys.

Probably the best part of the evening was that spent at the banquet table in Bowne Hall. At the close of the meal, Dean Tolley introduced President Brown to the group, who outlined the necessity of a college education. President Brown said that one the good derived from education will should put his ambition so high that at least be worthy of the effort exerted.

At 8 P. M., the boys witnessed two comedies presented by the College Players. The plays, both of them well received by the audience; were the first ever to be produced in Brothers College. The guests of the school were satisfied with the entertainment which climaxed so memorable a visit to Brothers College.

Dinner for College

The members of the Faculty and students of Brothers College were invited to attend a buffet supper at the home of President and Mrs. Brown on Thursday evening, May 22. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Baldwin and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Baldwin were present and most all the students attended the supper and met the two brothers.

Rand Debaters

Defeat Brethern

On Friday, May 9, the Rand School of Social Science defeated Brothers College in debate on "Capitalism vs. Socialism". The debate which was held in Baldwin Hall, was presided over by Dr. Arlo A. Brown. The judges, whose decision in favor of Rand was two to one, were Rev. Kenneth D. Miller, Pastor of the Madison Presbyterian Church; Harry A. Wann, principal of the Madison High School, and William P. Kinneman, engineer, of New York City.

The winning team composed of Miss Dora Horn Julius Unansky, and Miss Ethel Surie. Those who upheld capitalism as having within itself limitless possibilities for progress, and who contended that socialism was but an untried theory, were E. Franklin Carwithen, Faulkner Lewis and Johnston Stewart.

Capitalism was indicated as a condition of economic insecurity for the individual which develops and maintains only a small group in the economic life of the nation. The Rand orators put forth the theory that socialism would put the control of the country into the hands of many, thus eliminating the alleged evil conditions existing under a system of capitalism.

The so-called "chiasmic" system of debating was tried out with considerable success in the first forensic meet with Albright College, with the Brothers College men victorious. This same system was used almost equally as well in the contest with the Rand School.

The Yale Daily News recently deplored the undergraduate trend away from the natural sciences toward the humanities because, it maintained, the scientists who are having such a tremendous influence on modern thought remain little more than names to the academic student.

Beginning in September, 1931, the teams representing the University of Nebraska will play without a captain.

After the hot spell last week the Senate of Wesleyan University granted permission for the Freshman to discard coats and sweaters for the rest of the term.

College Players

Present First Play

On April 25, the Brothers College Players presented two comedies in the Samuel W. Bowne Hall before a large audience. The plays were coached by Mr. Burton Tarr, a student of the School of Theology. In addition to the college audience, students from several of the neighboring high schools who had been visiting the Drew campus during the "open house" day, as well as a number of Madison people, were guests.

The first play was entitled "Passe", written by McElbert Moore. It is a lively story of an actress whose stage days seem drawing to a close, even though he rown son resents the overheard suggestion of that fact bitterly enough to shoot the stranger who passes the comment. The mother's best acting is called into play to convince a police detective that the boy was not the instigator of the crime. The outcome of the play was that the detective "just had a clue".

"If Men Played Cards as Women Do", by George S. Kaufman, was the second number on the boards. This is a hilarious kit exaggerating the foibles of the ladies at the famous game.

The casts of both plays are:

Victoria King	John Lennon
Ben King	E. Franklin Carwithen
Martin King	Faulkner Lewis
Hugh Mason	Thomas Hastings
Joe Burke	Everett Lare
Marie	Stuart Thomas
"If Men Played Cards as Women Do"
John	Norman J. Blair
George	Robert R. Powell
Marc	George M. Cordner

As one means for the obviation of the professors at Johns Hopkins will the unfairness of numerical grades, give only three grades next year, H, honorary, S., satisfactory, and F, failure.

University Holds

Picture Contest

In connection with the annual Commencement plans an exhibition of Drew campus photographs of all sizes and descriptions, which may be submitted by any one except commercial and professional photographers, will be mounted and placed on view from May 31 to June 3. All pictures taken on the Drew campus and of interest to Drew students, Alumni and friends meet the conditions of the contest. They will be scanned by competent judges, who will award two prizes—one for treatment of artistic merit, and one for subjects of human interest on the campus. The rules of the contest specify that there will be no time limit placed on the pictures, and no limit on the number of pictures any one photographer may show. Colored photographs, however, are excluded.

Dr. Harry J. Smith, Librarian, who is in charge of the exhibit, states that there is only one condition which the University makes: submission of a print carries with it the tacit permission of the exhibitor that Drew University may make, at its own expense, a photographic copy of it for its own files and use. Many of the pictures will undoubtedly be worked into a book of Drew Views and be scattered all over the country, placed in the hands of Drew Alumni and friends.
