

Entertainment

War and Peace

One student reviews Tolstoy's classic, drawing parallels between czarist Russia, Home Alone, and Operation Desert Storm. Photos from the movie included.

Pages 7, 8, 9

DREW UNIVERSITY

Acron

Madison, NJ

April 1, 1991

Vol. 63, No. 57

Opinions

Spring style

As warm weather approaches and new fashions appear, Drew administrators are hardly rising to the challenge of representing Drew in the competitive world of academic garb.

Page 5

Sports complex plans revised

Jason Kosnoski
Kathy Kuehn

Responding to budget shortfalls and sluggish fund raising efforts, the University released modified plans for the new sports and recreation complex this week. Costing significantly less than the previous $15.3 zillion plan, the new proposal calls for construction of a make-believe gym, to be completed within the month.

"You can pretend to play basketball, you can pretend to play tennis, you can even pretend to do aquatics—can you say, 'aquatics'?" chief architect Fred Rogers said. "Make-believe is very healthy."

The new gym will be 45 stories tall, contain 12 basketball courts, three air-conditioned jai alai arenas, a concert facility that will seat 60,000, and individual hot tubs for each student. In addition, the complex will provide parking for 200 make-believe cars.

"This plan is really much more cost-effective than the other," Director of Facilities Operations Jim Maloney said. "Also, in this gym, anyone can do a slam dunk or bench press 400 pounds."

Tom Kean proudly displays an artist's rendering of the new make-believe gym. Photo by JASON BURCH

Maloney is encountering difficulty recruiting make-believe workers to build the make-believe gym, particularly in light of the University's make-believe credit rating.

Director of Public Safety Tom Evans, while doing the backstroke through the tennis court lot, said, "Heck, I like this idea already! I've already broken three world records for the backstroke and Australian crawl."

University President Tom Kean, while presenting the new plan to an angry mob of "concerned" students, said he believes the facility will help Drew recover from its student shortfall as an attraction to prospective students. "It is the acorn that will become the mighty, albeit make-believe, oak," Kean said. "With this gym, Drew can fulfill its long-term, short-term, and middle-term goals, completing my vision of the University in the Forest."

After students raised objections to the plan by burning the president in effigy, he calmly turned around, dropped his pants, and mooned the audience.

"I could have sworn I saw a tattoo," Executive Vice President Scooter said. "It might have been Woody Woodpecker smoking a cigar, but then it could have been a gray elephant. I just couldn't tell for sure."

Dean of Student Life Denise Alleyne said she thinks the new gym will provide the most fun on campus since the banning of kegs. "I think this is a strong step, a proactive step, a step to end all steps, a dam tootin' step, a peachy keen

See MAKE-BELIEVE page 29

Spring concert booked

Kathy Kosnoski
Jason Kuehn

Tullio "Pistachio Ice" Nieman will play in the new make-believe gym April 18 for this year's spring concert, Concert Committee Co-Chair Curt Combs commented.

"When Tullio used to talk about going into music, I thought he was only kidding. Apparently he wasn't, and fortunately we outbid the Meadowlands for the April gig," Combs said. In his act, Nieman covers hits such as, "Been Caught Stealing" by Jane's Addiction; "Little Lies," by Fleetwood Mac; and "Can't Buy Me Love," by the Beatles. Various costume changes also characterize Nieman's eclectic act. "I found it a little difficult to fit into Madonna's custom-made bra, but I think the effect is really worth it," Nieman said. Tickets will be 38 cents for the C.L.A.

Nieman performs "Feelings" at a press conference.

Record-high election turnout

Acron News Service
(Jason and Kathy)

A record 3,000 ballots were cast in the recent Student Government Association elections, according to Elections Chair Ellice Oston. "We were thrilled to see such enthusiasm, especially since we only have 1,400 students in the College of Liberal Arts. Usually only about 400 vote," Oston said.

When asked about the possibility of foul play, Oston said she doubted anyone would be so stupid as to attempt to fix an election. "This is such a small campus—only 1,400 C.L.A., like I said—they're bound to be caught."

S.G.A. President Matthew Latterell said, "I was pleased with the turnout, but it raised a few questions in my mind. Why did 3,000 people decide to vote in this election? And how was it that 3,000 ballots were cast when we only printed 2,000?" $150,000 has been set aside for the incoming administration's inauguration ceremony.

Haselton purchased Offer alleviates budget problems

Kathy Kuehn
Jason Kosnoski

A Japanese investment firm came to the aid of Drew's budget woes this week with a record-high offer to purchase Haselton for $1.5 million. The firm plans to close the hall for two years, after which it will re-open as a Jack-in-the-Box fast food joint.

Although concerned about the disruption to campus, University President Tom Kean said he saw this as the best solution to the budget deficit. "At least we'll finally have a good place to get tacos," Kean said.

Apparently dismayed by the news of Haselton's purchase, Director of Residence Life John Ricci said, "It wasn't my decision. I wasn't on campus that day. I didn't have anything to do with it, it was locusts—a terrible flood! It just wasn't my fault."

Director of Admissions Roberto Noya said he expects problems in a few years once the declining demographic trend reverses and the number of incoming students increases. "Until then I'm not sure the administration sees any point in worrying about that. Why plan ahead?"

A spokesperson for the investment firm said major renovations are necessary before the building will pass inspection by the Board of Health. Upon preliminary inspection, various forms of radioactive waste and mutated squirrels were found in the basement, he said. "This building would have a hard time passing inspection by a 14th century monk who was accustomed to dealing with towns infested by the Black Plague."

Haselton's unique architecture also poses problems for the investors, though these are not insurmountable, the spokesperson said. "The person who designed this building was obviously under the influence of hallucinogens," he said. "The first thing we plan to do is rip out all those bathrooms. Most of the urinals don't work anyhow."

The dorm's residents said they are pleased with this solution to the Haselton question. "I was concerned that I wouldn't be able to walk around in my underwear anywhere else," sophomore Brian Duff said. "But then I figured—why not? People probably walk around in boxers on Holloway third, too."

Director of Public Safety Tom Evans said he does not look forward to the traffic problems a fast-food restaurant on campus will create. "Where are these customers going to park? We don't even have enough space for our own people," he said. "The one-way traffic pattern is also difficult. Inevitably someone not familiar with our campus will go the wrong way and cause a 10-car pileup."

Director of Facilities Operations Jim Maloney said preliminary plans for a drive-thru window under the stone gate at the front of campus have been looked at. "As soon as the new gym is finished, we should be able to devote all of our resources to channeling traffic around campus, rather than through," he said.

The new restaurant will also provide students with an alternative to the Commons and Snack Bar, Kean said, which should boost recruitment efforts. "Not many universities have a fast-food place right in the middle of campus," he said. "Drew can now offer something truly unique among institutions of higher education."

EDITORIAL

Scamming, for those of you who are unfamiliar with the term, refers to the process of putting the moves on a prospective sexual interest. The art of scamming can be elusive to those who have not been properly instructed, as is evident by the poor quality of scamming done on Drew's campus. With the few simple guidelines provided, scamming can become enjoyable and productive for all members of the Drew Community (even the administration).

The choice usually takes place in a suite or in the Hoyt-Bowen triple in a semi-drunken stupor. Try and choose someone that you are at least somewhat attracted to (so that when you wake up the next morning you can be proud rather than remorseful of your previous night's accomplishments). Picking someone with a "significant other" is not a swift move. Going after someone who has just downed 52 beers is also not very swift unless you enjoy hooking up in bathrooms. After you have chosen a likely candidate, you may proceed to the next step.

Approaching someone with the intent to scam is probably the most terrifying part of the whole process. It must be done carefully and with tact, so as not to scare away the anticipated date for the evening. Try to avoid using such tired cliches as "Yo, baby, you got a nice butt," "Wanna blow this joint?" or "Did anyone ever tell you that your eyes are like the deepest blue of the ocean waters?" UGH!

You might want to start by trying the "Bump and Smile" technique. This works especially well at suite parties. Standard procedure involves "accidentally" bumping into someone and then smiling seductively while apologizing. This allows you to get close enough so as to make an informed decision about whether you really want to leave with this person. If so, continue. Otherwise, regroup and try again.

After you have, for all intents and purposes, scored, you must still contend with making a silent exit—secrecy is part of the art of a successful scam. One way is the "You go first" method. Decide upon a mutual meeting place ("Your room or mine?") and then decide who is going to leave first. The second person should follow after a decent amount of time so as not to arouse suspicion. The rest is up to you.

Knowing these basic steps should help you in your effort to become a master scammer. However, you should be aware of some of the dangers involved. Classic blunders include uncontrollable groping—please keep a hand(ie) on it until you can get some privacy—losing the race back to the room, losing your buzz before you've gotten any, and finally the "Oops, my roommate came home early" phenomenon. By avoiding these, you can abstain from the "Sunday brunch" tell-all gossip sessions. This is, of course, conjecture on our part, having personally made no foul-ups, bleeps, or blunders.

You may see scamming as a waste of time. You just don't know what you are doing. Scamming needs to be appreciated more by those on Drew's campus. It is an art form that should be revitalized.

As it is now, people are unaware of the proper procedure. A complete overhaul of the Drew educational system is necessary. This editorial is just the beginning. Scamming should become an integral part of Drew life. Everyone should be involved. Make it a distribution requirement, have the Green Key Guides use it as a selling point, give it a line in the budget (therefore justifying the eight percent budget increase).

With scamming as a wide-spread tactic, the Drew Community will become an even more intimate and friendly environment in which to work and study. Scamming is the cure to an apathetic Drew. Just do it. You may be surprised at how much more fun and exciting those parties can be. It is incomprehensible that with all of these resources available to us, more people do not take advantage of the opportunity to scam.

Letters to the Editor

Applicant describes willingness for position

To the Editor:

After hearing about the recent resignation of Executive Vice President Scott McDonald, and his upcoming departure in May, I once again found myself wondering about the thrills of the academic life (I graduated from college myself, you know).

Ahhh... What a wondrous thrill it is to be on a college campus, mingling with the young (you know, we get along so well, today's youth and I). And not only does this exhilarate me, but so do the lovely woods surrounding your area.

You see, well, I might need a job sometime soon (Uncle George doesn't like to admit it in public, but, truthfully, he thinks he has to bring me down to his level for me to run with him, unlike Norman, the simpleton...). Well, anyway, I would like to be considered for the position.

First of all, I have some limited experience in administration, having been in the Student Government Association in high school (I hear yours can use a little help). Furthermore, as I have stated, I have such a great interest in the academic life and a profound interest in teaching. Heck, especially in these times of war I could teach you all how to avoid the draft like I did (probably will be popular on this campus—yes, little brother can watch you just as well as big brother).

And, gee, I just really am a nice guy. And as Uncle George says, new no tuition! (At least I think that's right). Thank you for your consideration. Love ya Scooter.

Dan Quack
Vice President

Book Club fails for lack of ECAB funding

To the Editor:

As president of the Book Club, I am writing to you to tell you of the dissolution of the Book Club.

Unfortunately, the Extra Classroom Activities Board failed to give us any money. I am really, really mad about this. I am really, really mad about this for three reasons.

The first reason why I am really, really mad about this is that the Book Club plays an important role for this campus. Who else would go around to students' rooms in order to fine them a nickel for every minute they have a book overdue from our fine Rose Memorial Library?

The second reason I am really, really mad about this is that our club provided such a service for the community. We not only saw to the return of library books, but we also had such widespread popularity. A total of five members were truly dedicated to the cause, but without funding, we are without the necessary resources to continue in our activity.

The third reason why I am really, really mad about this is that who knows what will happen with the money now? (You could even say that I am pissed off.) We each paid our student activities fee, but now our money will probably go to those nasty Shoe Club people. No one really cares what's on the bottom of her/his shoes after they leave a suite party, do they?

To help us out, could anyone who's interested please start a petition to the ECAB chair so that she will not squander our money or leave us down in the dumps? You know we're important, but now we need you support.

Dim Dewey
President, Book Club

Student declares intent to transfer to FDU

To the Editor:

Although it seems fairly ridiculous to leave this lovely, wooded campus of ours, I must because of my vast love for Fairleigh Dickinson University.

First of all, FDU's academic reputation greatly exceeds Drew's. Although Drew's classes are fine and the professors nice, the study atmosphere here is not conducive to achieving good grades. There are just too many clubs meeting and interesting events constantly occurring that I feel overly compelled to be socially aware and active, and therefore my grades suffer. I know this is not the case at Fairleigh Dickinson, as the students there can use their study skills to the max as there is nothing to do.

Another reason I possess for leaving Drew is the lack of fraternities. No one here truly understands the purpose of these institutions. A Drewid thinks of frat only in terms of drinking, but for me a fraternity also is a continuation of history. Only in a frat may one be openly sexist and racist, homophobic and ignorant. Drew, to its loss, does not possess these grand traditions in higher education.

Finally, in leaving Drew, I must state that the resignation of Executive Vice President Scott McDonald (lovingly called "Scooter" by those who know him best) has played a great part. With McDonald's departure Drew will simply, totally lose its reputation, and that reputation was one of my biggest reasons to come here in the first place.

I wish the rest of you luck at this overrated, tree-ridden swamp.

Pavlovava Smuch
Freshman

President Tom Kean's
open office minute will be Sunday, April 7,
2:30-2:31 a.m.,
at his home in Livingston.

SUITE BEAT

If you want to know what goes on behind closed curtains, who that couple was in the bushes behind Welch, and who has been seen slinking out of Haselton at 4 a.m., then read on. This is SUITE BEAT, the new gossip column that bares all and spares none. From Hoyt to Tolley, Baldwin to Brown, the searching eyes of SUITE BEAT can always be found. There to tell YOU, WHO is in the news.

TOLLEY: That haven for underclass students and home of THE PIT, or should we call it the dungeon of vice?

"I'm afraid to leave my room after midnight," one sophomore said. "All those underclassman athletes wandering around are dangerous. They have a chip on their shoulder. One clubbed my roommate and dragged her back to his room like a Neanderthal."

One hot young jock—a six-foot-four basketball star known for his three-point prowess—is definitely on the prowl. Watch out women. Welch is yours, but beware the perils of THE PIT.

BROWN: Don't be fooled by the so-called innocence of this mansion of mayhem. What lurks in the minds of the young men and women behind these doors? SUITE BEAT knows. When lights are dim, daring young women and men grab their pillows and go calling. What's that rhythmic noise from above? I doubt two roommates are doing aerobics at 2 a.m.

BALDWIN-HASELTON: These brother and sister dorms are definitely "keeping it in the family." Countless ships pass in the night, making the lonely journey in search of love across that muddy, barren courtyard, then back again.

Late-night screaming jarred many from their sleep on a lonely night not long ago. All had a ringside seat as a nameless handsome hubby and his busty, pale-skinned beauty parried and thrust in the name of love. SUITE BEAT warning: Stay away single searchers, this partying woman and her quiet English man are still definitely an item.

WELCH: Don't be a fool and believe this so-called "Virgin Vault" has no secrets of its own.

Who was that love-starved gentleman staring at the glazed bathroom windows from behind a sturdy oak? Not even SUITE BEAT knows, but watch out cheap voyeurs, you cannot escape our ever-watchful eye.

Welchkin tip: Those walk-in closets can hide a lot more than luggage from the nosy inquiries of jealous neighbors. Beware men: Wear a watch. Get stuck in Welch after midnight and risk discovery, or wait till morning to slink out while the women line up to shower.

HOYT: Most Drewids count their blessings and pray that one day they can live in Hoyt, the pinnacle of precocious partying as well as precious privacy. "The fourth floor is a long way up," said one female who never makes the tall trip alone. "No-one can hear what's going on up there."

A stocky, curly-haired R.A. who monitors the raucous parties on the first floor has his own insight on the Hoyt phenomenon. "People always go in alone and come out in pairs. I've heard the cheesiest lines. 'Wanna see my loft?' definitely ranks at the top."

THE SUITES: The place where "all the news that isn't fit to print" hits

"What exactly is flogging the dolphin?" Marilyn Quayle (sophomore Suzy Snowflake) asks Saddam Hussein (junior Johnny Jehosephat) in the new political drama Baghdad. "Some say our love can't last through the language barrier or through the carpet bombing, but if we work hard enough we shall overcome," declares Hussein. Playing tonight through Saturday in the Commonplace Theatre, all shows are at 8 p.m. Due to new regulations, no one will be allowed inside the theatre sober. Call x6231 for reservations. ACRON file photo

Personals

Single sophomore female interested in sophomore male. Likes rugby players, soccer players, and lacrosse players. If qualified call x6439.

Recently singled senior male in search of first-year blonde bombshell with corresponding SAT scores and bra size. I am most comfortable with small intimate groups rather than large groups. Send photo to C.M. 9113.

Male transfer student looking for life-long companionship. Search at Madison High failed. Thought perhaps child of grad school student might make me happy. Call x6706.

Junior female economics/computer science/biology/chemistry/physics penta-major with 4.0 looking for member of opposite sex with similar credentials. Accomplishments include creating a program with interchangeable interfaces for version 7.653 of MS-DOS and also discovering an equation for pi, thus proving it non-irrational. Send resume and transcript C.M. 3141.

Sophomore male looking for administrative housing specialist-type-o-person. Under two years experience at Drew required. Moustache and small build a plus. Bad reputation okay. Do you fit? Call x6969.

the fan. The decadent Rome of Drew University. The home of tobacco-spitting lax players and tanning-bed beauties remains the uncontested party capital of the C.L.A. Those cramped living rooms give way to spacious bedrooms for those lucky enough to win their way to the inner sanctum. Beware one-time lovers. Leave compromising clothing and you'll find it hanging over the living room TV. "I forgot to take a certain piece of clothing and went back the next day to get it," said one young Rugby player. "When I got to her room, she reached under the bed and pulled out someone else's shorts!" If you like life in the fast lane, the suites are for you. SUITE BEAT TIP OF THE WEEK: Always wear a wet suit when you go diving in the sea of love.

DIVERSIONS

HeadPennies
AMC

Shows before 6 a.m. five cents

Debbie Does Drew
Ronald Does Ricci
The Kean Mutiny
McDonald's Playland
Star Trek LVI
The Dorms: Featuring Hans Morsink
The Silence of the Deans

Call theatre for show times

PLAYING IN
U.C. 107, L.C.,
MRC, B.C. &
H.S.

Attack of the Killer Acronyms
Starring R.A.s, R.D.s, VPs, and members of ECAB, SGA, and O.C.

AT THIS END

Friday: Center for Social Outcasts Cabaret
Saturday: 69 Loantaka Way
Sunday: Study night with recorded elevator music

FOR FURTHER
ENTERTAINMENT
PLEASURES DIAL
x4111 AND TALK TO THE ASPEN
LADY

The Students Without Concerns Club is now taking applications for membership. Just write something about yourself on a piece of paper and give it to a current member. We don't really have regular meetings or anything, but we will probably meet at least a few times a year.

TOP 5 LIST

Top five reasons why Acron editors are desperate:

5. Because we are too tired on Fridays.
4. Because we can't go to Thursday night rugby parties (except for Charlie).
3. We all want Jason, but the feelings are not mutual.
2. Students are apathetic to the cause.
1. Because Greg Gordon has a girlfriend.

Tasha and Waxhead

Acron
DREW UNIVERSITY
P.O. Box 803 C.M. Box HB 525 Madison, NJ 07940-0803 (201) 408-6666

Kathy Kuehn Chuck Clayton
Not-Editors in Chief

The Acron, established in 1428, is a newspaper. It is what we make it every week. The above editorial represents the opinion of the not-editors in chief of the Acron. If you do not agree with said opinion, tough shit. The opinions expressed in bylined editorials are those of the writers and not necessarily those of the Acron editors or staff, or of the administration, trustees, faculty, squirrels, or staff of Drew University. We do not take responsibility for what these idiots say.

All letters to the editor must be signed, typed, double-spaced, illustrated, and accompanied by a phone number, photograph, personal biography, and address; letters should be relevant, or not, to the Drew Community and must not exceed 15,000 words. Names may or may not be withheld if contemptible circumstances exist. Letters and oatmeal must be received, via campus mail or the Acron office mail slot, by 8 p.m. on the Monday preceding the second full moon after the spring equinox before publication. The Acron reserves the right to edit or delete letters for reasons of space constraints, libelous content, or whim.

People are solicited from the Drew Community and the general public. People with poor taste or determined to be discriminatory will not be tolerated.

STAFF

News Writers: The News Editors
Opinions Editor: Master Clayton
Assistant: Bozo
Photography Editor: Tasha
Assistant: Jason #2
Business Mgr.: None of your business

Entertainment Editor: Butthead
Sports Editors: Haselton residents
Pasteup Mgr.: Waxhead
Copyeditor: Hacksaw
Advertising Mgr.: Whoosh...
Business Mgr.: None of your business

Fencers duel women's tennis over gym space

Peter Arnett
Battlefield Correspondent

A bloody battle ensued in Baldwin Gymnasium yesterday when the fencing team grew impatient at the lack of practice time and gym space. Their frustrations were taken out on the women's tennis team, who merely showed up for what they thought was their 8:30 p.m. practice time.

"We are a young team, but we showed a lot of heart tonight," captain Pete Turecek said. "Our opponents baffled us with their unorthodox style of swordsmanship."

Sophomore Ted Rotunda was not in awe of his opponents though. "We could have ripped those girls to shreds," he said. "I wield the power of the sword; and someone had to pay."

When he tried to play the role of peacemaker during the altercation, Director of Athletics Dick Szlasa was held at sword-point by an incensed Turecek. "I wanted to slay the demon behind the lack of gym space," Turecek said. After Szlasa conceded the gym to the fencers, he was forced to take an oath that he would never interfere with fencing practice again.

"I am pleased with their positive approach and dedication to their sport," Szlasa said. "However... those guys are nuts!"

Performing well for the tennis team was junior Deborah Butts. The usually reserved Butts started the brawl when she shouted, "Get the 'geek squad' out of here!"

Other standout contributions were turned in by sophomore Stephanie Saunders, who took on two fencers at once and proceeded to oust them, 6-0, 6-0. "My serve-and-volley game was effective," Saunders said.

We might have found our solution to the lack of gym space. After all, both teams got a good workout, but I recommend to the fencing team that this is not the 1400s.

—Dick Szlasa
Director of Athletics

"I've been working on it all winter and was happy to gain the experience."

Turecek sees the duel as an image booster for the fencers.

"Bush had Iraq, now we have this," Turecek said. "The other teams better beware. I don't think the wimp factor is a question anymore."

All in all, this was a positive experience for both teams. "We might have found our solution to the lack of gym space," Szlasa said. "After all, both teams got a good workout, but I recommend to the fencing team that this is not the 1400s."

Mummert terrorizes athletes: Still at large

The Rabbit
Staff Hostage

Renegade men's soccer and tennis coach Vernon Mummert took a twisted turn for the worse this week. Dismayed over the loss of key members to graduation, Mummert unleashed his fury on senior Phil Morin.

Morin, who elected to bypass his senior year of eligibility in favor of participating in Drew's London semester, was the victim of a terrible ordeal.

While Morin was enjoying a friendly game of tennis with fellow senior and friend Dan Stewart, Mummert leaped from the gazebo and landed on the dazed Morin.

After rendering Morin unconscious by cracking him over the head with a tennis racket, Mummert tossed the senior midfielder into equipment manager Billy Hosking's office.

There Morin was subjected to the torture of repeatedly watching videotapes of old Drew-Scranton soccer games.

Only a year ago Mummert said, "Phil Morin is what Drew is all about." Now it seems that the unruly coach wants Morin to become a permanent fixture on campus. The current situation was instigated when Morin informed his coach of his intentions to move on to law school next year.

Before being freed by Sports Information Director Anne Bready, who was simply checking her laundry in Hosking's office, an incoherent Morin could be heard through the laundry chute continuously repeating the words "jockey, contain, and finish."

Apparently, this is not the first time Mummert has resorted to such tactics. Drew alumni and former soccer and tennis players such as Mark Rush, Ed Leskauskas, Steve Every, and Joe Beneducci were later found bound and gagged in the Arboretum.

Meanwhile, Mummert is still at large. He may be on a massive recruiting trip.

Director of Public Safety Tom Evans warns that Mummert may be dangerous, at least after one-goal losses.

"My men are trained to deal with situations like this," Evans said. "If he approaches you, do not try to apprehend him. Just wave and yell 'Drew ball.'"

Hopefully number two pitcher Rob Denkin will continue to get Ranger ace Ted Otten out of tight squeezes as he is seen doing here. Photo by I. CAUGHTCHA

Jockey: Jim Palmer Sports Briefs

✶7'6" Shawn Bradley of Brigham Young University announced that he would serve his Mormon mission in Madison, NJ, allowing him to play for the Rangers. "I was going to transfer to UNLV, but it's not the best place for a Mormon," Bradley said. "Coach (Vince) Masco assured me that this campus is the perfect Mormon atmosphere."

Masco expressed his delight upon learning that Bradley was transferring to Drew. "If he can get his head under the door, he'll be playing for us," Masco said. "But remember, Shawn is still young and he's kind of awkward. So we are going to bring him along slowly."

Masco said he hopes that Bradley will be able to lift the Rangers to the top of the Middle Atlantic Conference. "If we can keep the big guy healthy, if he can keep his head out of the clouds, if he is able to adapt to our offense, if he doesn't break too many backboards, if he can be an effective shot-blocker, then we should be all right next year," Masco said.

Bradley's arrival will balance the loss of junior Scott Moody, who will bypass his senior year at Drew and declare himself eligible for the NBA draft. A crowd-favorite for the past three years, Moody has high hopes for a career in the pros.

"With NBA expansion to Dubuque and Fargo, ND, there's a good chance I could hook up with a club," Moody said. "That would be nice. There aren't many good forwards coming out this year, so I have an outside shot at being in the lottery. That would definitely be nice."

Masco seemed unphased by Moody's departure. "He really didn't fit into our plans anyway with Bradley coming in," Masco said. "Besides, I think Scott's ready to go."

✶Tom Kean decreed that the Drew bear will be replaced by the elephant as campus mascot. "The elephant will better symbolize our university," Kean said. Despite complaints from students that no elephants live in the forest, Kean went ahead with the plan.

College Republicans President Scott Serviss said he will urge students to fill the role. "Since announcing volunteers for the mascot, over 300 students have applied for the position," Serviss said. "I guess we are all elephants at heart. Hail Bush! Hail Bush!"

Senior Melissa Corbett of the College Democrats responded by saying, "I don't know what's wrong with a donkey. We all make asses out of ourselves sometimes."

✶Assistant men's lacrosse coach and Director of Intramurals Dave Steffano has reached the end of his one-month contract. Replacing Steffano will be Buddy Ryan, former coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

"It's a good opportunity for me here at Drew," Ryan said. "Nobody else would hire me, but this is where my heart has always been. Everything will work out fine as long as those damn Acron people stay out of my way."

Steffano, the 10th person to fill the position in the past 10 months, was grateful for his stay at Drew and will move on to coach the New York Giants in the NFL. "I was out of work before Drew gave me a chance," Steffano said. "Then all of a sudden offers came pouring in."

Ryan is enthusiastic about the intramural program and has innovative ideas to enlarge the program.

"Forget this flag football bullshit," Ryan said. "We're going to put on the pads and play like real men."

Ryan announced that voluntary training camp will begin tomorrow morning at 6 a.m. and that he expects everyone to be there promptly.

Snotty's Records presents:

The first solo album from

MC Vince

Please Vince don't hurt 'em

featuring the #1 smash hits

"Can't Lose This" &

"We've got to pray just to score today"